What's new:

: Second of The Broken Empire (5th ed) The year was 2118 and the remnants of Chaos had once again clawed their way across the galaxy. They would ravage, devastate and destroy as they made their way to the heart of the Milky Way. Along the way they would make unwitting allies from among the galaxy's best and the worst. In a world of light and dark warriors set upon each other, only one thing mattered: the Death God Horus, who had rescued Andromeda and would one day free its people from evil. This is his story. It made it within its landings bay and was presumably airlifted out. Shortly after that it was burned out and destroyed. The ship was the Northern Emperor, and it is a capital ship of great power: a complete engine, quarters for 30, a variety of weaponry, and a central processing core and data-storage system. All of it destroyed. The Sanctuary does not even know if the Winterblade was aboard. All they know is that eleven men died, and that the hull was made of jade. Also: the Winterblade. The warrior who slayed a full Pantheon of the Chaos Gods. Why is that? Why would one so important to The
