Adobe calls Photoshop Elements _fun_! ## Using a Credit Card The first step to using Photoshop is to turn on the Photoshop Elements. You do this by following these steps: 1. Click the Rectangle tool. In this case, I selected the Rectangle tool, but you can select others in the toolbox. The first step in using Photoshop is to select the tool of choice. 2. Click to draw a rectangle on the screen. You'll notice that the tools in the toolbox change depending on where you click, as shown in Figure 5-5. In this case, the rectangle tool is selected so that you can draw a rectangle. 3. The rectangle appears onscreen. The more you draw, the larger the rectangle gets, and the more you draw, the more it fills with colors from your image. Keep drawing until the rectangle is about the size of the entire image you want to alter. 4. Optionally, right-click the image or the image layer and choose Create New or Open from File. This step creates an image from the existing image in your library. You use Open from File for some image adjustments; see the next section, "Taking a look at some command options." FIGURE 5-5: The toolbox changes to reflect the tool you select. Adobe's online tutorial videos are excellent and easy to follow. They explain exactly how to perform many of Photoshop's most commonly used techniques. Just type _Adobe Photoshop CS6, Photoshop Elements 11, or Photoshop CS6_ in the search box on the Adobe site and click the (free!) button that says "Search." You'll see a long list of videos to choose from. You may also be able to find other helpful videos at www.youtube.com. Ask HN: I have an idea and I can't sleep, what should I do? - samsolomon I have a big project that is a combination of a business and a visual novel idea. I have been working on it for about a year now, and I am unable to sleep. I have an idea that will disrupt the market place, but I don't know if it will be successful. I am determined to launch my product regardless. I do have a technical guy on-board to help me build it, and he is willing to let me develop it if I pay him 10% of the company's profits to cover his time. We both have good jobs, and our families are also supporting us. Does anyone else have any experience dealing with self-induced insomnia? I am looking for advice on how to be able to sleep. ===== craigkerstiens I wouldn't take sleep advice from a HN reader about business or startups, and I would imagine that you wouldn't take advice from a startup about insomnia. In any case, you shouldn't care about sleep until you're actually at the point where you need to be working when you don't have enough sleep. That's something you should be talking to a doctor about. If it's not a realistic expectation that you should sleep every night, then what you're doing isn't a terrible idea. Odds are, if you're doing this for the right reasons then you will eventually be able to sleep again when you finish it, and it will be because you want to and not because you're tired. ----- smsm42 Make it way less complicated for yourself. Find a partner for whom you have a shared interest. Hire him/her. Do whatever it takes, even pay him/her through your other company to do it for you, so you don't have to spend time on it. I have seen people do similar insane things and succeed. ----- oompa Do the work to finish it and then sleep. I've never met a problem that being undetected was not an option.
