Sean Hannity said there should be more government control of health care and campaign finance. Joe Scarborough said he was still mad at Barack Obama. These are some of the momentous assertions from cable news's longtime partisan radio hosts to be featured in a just-released guide entitled "Divided We Stand: Cable News's Incendiary Voices." The guide was launched by a group called FAIR, which describes itself as "the civil liberties organization for the progressive movement." "The guide, which will be updated regularly, is meant to provide evidence-based documentation and an index of all these personalities' remarks to help progressive activists combat the lies promulgated by their enemies in the right-wing media," FAIR president Daniel J. Flynn said. "We want to make it easier for others to call out these liars when they're spreading misinformation and hate," he said, "because it's hard to tell which of their mouths is spewing lies and which is just venting." Some of the shoddy reporting and outright insults from MSNBC's "Hardball" host Chris Matthews to Fox News's "Outnumbered" host Andrea Tantaros have been recalled in the guide. Other hosts' sins, such as when MSNBC's Joe Scarborough called Obama a racist, can't be listed because they're "inarguable." The guide doesn't cite MSNBC or Fox News specifically. The guide "doesn't aim to be a one-size-fits-all compilation," Flynn said. "The news media is too fractured, but there's some evidence that shows which hosts are more invested in political battles than their colleagues." The sections of the guide include allegations of false reporting; sayings that are "carefully weighed and nuanced" in news but are nonetheless
